Title: Southcentral/Solutions Reporter
Reports to: News & Public Affairs Director
FSLA Status: Exempt
Version: 2.0

The Southcentral/Solutions reporter will cover urban affairs with a primary focus on Southcentral Alaska for Alaska Public Media, the source for NPR and PBS in the region and the stewards of the statewide news service.

The Solutions Desk reporter produces in-depth reporting on the people, communities and programs in Alaska who are trying to solve social problems. The idea is to go beyond exposing what's wrong in Alaska and instead highlight what's being done to fix it. The Solutions Desk aims to change the narrative for Alaska communities and help people see possibilities for change. This reporter will focus on amplifying the voices of communities that are often overlooked. They will also be an advocate for solutions journalism in the newsroom, but will do general assignment reporting along with solutions-oriented stories.

Topics will focus on social justice issues including in part racial equity, the criminal justice system, child welfare, health and social services, access to health care, housing and homelessness, immigration, jobs and economy, and other public issues. The reporter will produce a variety of contributions – from sound-rich features to in-depth investigations to community discussion and listening events.
